Empowering communities to help children build lasting connections with the natural world

Example 3:

Nature for Children Every Day. 🌿

Research shows that when children learn and play in @natureexplore Classrooms, they develop important skills that support whole child development, including:

- Critical thinking and problem-solving
- Curiosity and inquiry
- Early science exploration
- Self-expression
- Language and literacy
- Early math through observing and organizing
- Visual-spatial thinking
- Gross and fine motor skills
- Construction and early engineering

Nature isn't just a place to play, it's a powerful place to learn and grow.

That's why {Organization name} supports the Nature for Children Every Day initiative.
